

Idaho Power craves Magic Valley plant

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News Writer

BOISE—Idaho Power Co. today asked permission of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (IPUC) to build a 500,000 kilowatt coal fired generating plant "to help prevent shortages" and suggested three acceptable sites, including two in Magic Valley.

The application lists the possible locations as American Falls in Power County, about four miles west of town, Bliss in Gooding County, about 2.5 miles north of town, and Sid's Crossing in Lincoln County, about 22 miles east of Shoshone. All three sites are adjacent to the railroad.

Earliest possible completion date would be 1982. In a lengthy statement released during a press conference this morning, James E. Bruce, Idaho Power president said the company's studies have not progressed far enough to indicate a "preferred" site.

Representatives of the news media in southern Idaho were invited to fly to the press conference by Idaho Power.

Both the Lincoln and Gooding county commission chairmen today expressed gratification that sites in their areas are "still in the running" for selection of the proposed plant.

John LeMay, Gooding chairman, said "It's a shame not to have more hydro plants, but if that is not available, we do need the extra power."

Everett Ward, Richfield, Lincoln commission chairman, said "I'm personally very glad to have them choose Sid's Crossing. I'd like to see hydro plants but if the water supply is not there, the coal fired plant is a necessary alternate."

Dietrich Meyer Cliff Davis is out of town on vacation and Bliss mayor Roland Zollinger could not be reached for comment.

Both officials earlier had said they would welcome location of a plant near their communities.

Idaho Power president Bruce pointed out that the plant site must satisfy stiff environmental, social, economic, engineering and operating criteria and Idaho Power's aim in suggesting three locations is "to have general agreement on a site before a decision is made on a preferred location."

"We're not trying to force the plant on anyone and we intend to work openly with all groups to collectively find an acceptable site," Bruce said.

The power company chief stressed the "need for a major new generating source is clearly shown by our load growth forecast as well as being recognized by the PUC and that the alternative to no plant at all is shortages starting in 1980 and increasing each year thereafter."

Bruce labeled as "completely false" assertions that Idaho Power could offset its generating deficiencies in the 1980's by buying power from outside sources, as it presently is doing because of the drought.

Company officials estimated the hearings the PUC will conduct on the application could well take a year and the plant will take five years to build after the site is selected and numerous regulatory approval obtained.

Cost of the plant has not been estimated, Bruce said, since it will depend upon "a number of factors subject to rapid change including inflation rate, financing costs, environmental quality equipment required and the site which is selected."

The proposed plant will burn low sulfur Wyoming coal and will be designed, built and operated to meet applicable federal and state water and air quality standards. The plant will have electric dust precipitators and sulfur removal equipment, the application said.

Southern states drought sends migrant workers to Idaho

By SHANE O'NEIL
Times-News writer

BURLEY—Drought conditions in southern states have sent more migrant workers into Idaho this year.

Brigido Ysquierdo, head of the Idaho Migrant Council at Burley, said the drought has raised the number of clients handled by the center in Burley 20 to 25 per cent.

He said quite a few migrants arriving in Idaho are being forced to use the services of the migrant council for the first time.

He said these are families which usually went to California or Florida but could not find work there because of the drought.

Ysquierdo said the heavier influx of migrants has caused a housing problem, as well as higher unemployment situation. He said many migrant families here for the first time have been unable to find work or housing and he has seen many move back to their home areas.

Ysquierdo said the migrant council has surveyed the labor camps operated by local farmers. He said all five are completely full.

These include the Hines, Wilson and Minidoka labor camps in Minidoka County, and the Burley and Canyon labor camps in Cassia County. The survey did not include the Paul Labor Camp, which is operated under auspices of the Paul Housing Authority.

The migrant chief said each camp contains 60 to 90 units and the survey showed two to three small families living in many of the units.

He estimated the five camps are now housing about 800 families or 4,000 people.

The survey did not include the migrants who found housing for rent in town or are provided housing on individual farms. He estimated the camps house 80 per cent of approximately 5,000 migrant workers now in the Mini-Cassia area.

Ysquierdo said 90 to 95 per cent of the migrants who will come to the Mini-Cassia area this summer are already here.

He said families who waited in southern states for youngsters to get out of school began to arrive this week.

The migrant center in Burley has been able to provide some emergency food, but Ysquierdo said it has been unable to find resources to help with transportation for those migrants who decided to return home. The council has also been unable to find enough work for the incoming migrants.

Ysquierdo said the situation has "leveled off." He said those migrants who remained in the area have, for the most part, found both housing and employment now.

But Ysquierdo said the available work has gone faster than normal because of the higher number of migrant workers. He said that he expects the problem of housing and unemployment to return in a few weeks as work is completed.

Watergate may finally become history

SCANDAL LANDMARK
... Watergate Hotel now famous

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In five days, when John Newton Mitchell and Harry Robbins Haldeman are mugged and fingerprinted and get their prison numbers, Watergate will pass from the legal scholars to the history students. An era will end when those two giants of the Nixon presidency — the former attorney general and the former White House chief of staff — join the federal prison population.

Five years ago today, five men carrying burglars' tools and electronic eavesdropping devices and wearing rubber gloves broke into Democratic headquarters at the Watergate and altered American politics.

Since then, more than 50 men have gone to jail. Haldeman and Mitchell are the last two. Other close aides of Richard Nixon who have served time include:

John Ehrlichman, domestic affairs adviser convicted with Haldeman and Mitchell of the Watergate cover-up; John Dean, counsel to the President; Charles Colson, special White House counsel; Dwight Chapin, deputy communications director; Ehrlichman's deputy, Egil Krogh.

Attorney General Richard Kleindienst was given a suspended sentence for lying at his Senate confirmation hearings. The conspiracy conviction of deputy Attorney General Robert Mardian was overturned on appeal. Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans and Treasury Secretary John Connally were indicted but acquitted.

Sixty-three men — including 20 former top Nixon aides — were charged with criminal activity. A total of 54 were convicted or pleaded guilty. Eight were acquitted or charged were dropped. One, Robert Vesco, fled the country.

In addition, 17 corporations pleaded guilty to making illegal contributions to the Nixon campaign.

G. Gordon Liddy, mystery man of Watergate, is the only one connected with the scandal to spend his fifth anniversary in jail. And he may be out July 8.

Liddy, an ex-FBI man, one of the original Watergate burglars and mastermind of the White House plumbers unit, is the only person indicted in connection with Watergate never to speak publicly about the scandal.

Watergate cost the American taxpayers $11 million — $8 million spent by the special prosecution force and $3.5 million each on the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry — and by the Senate Watergate Committee.

In the scandal's aftermath, Congress passed extensive election reform laws. It now is illegal for presidential campaign aides to run around with $100 bills stashed in black suitcases to finance dirty tricks on political opponents.

Political "fat cats" now are limited to campaign contributions of $1,000. The U.S. Treasury financed 65 per cent of the 1976 presidential election, the first time public funds were used.

Indirectly as a result of Watergate, sunshine laws have been enacted, opening once secret government agency work to the press and the public.

And a new phrase — "post Watergate morality" — has been added to the political lexicon.

By all reports, Nixon is at peace with himself in his exile in San Clemente. He refers to his resignation as a fate worse than death, but he goes most every day and with fees collected for his memoirs and his televised interviews.

More Idaho hydro sites may be sought

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. will seek permission to build additional hydro-electric plants to fill the need for additional power until a coal-fired plant can be completed, company officials said today.

The hydro-electric plants would be located between Marsing and Hagerman and on the Payette River, according to an announcement made this morning.

During a Boise press conference announcing the firm's formal filing of an application to construct a $600 million coal-fired plant, President James E. Bruce said several "comparatively small" hydro plants with a total capacity of 150,000 to 200,000 kilowatts, equal to one year's load growth also will be necessary to help prevent projected power shortages.

Idaho Power said in its application that the PUC will be asked "in the near future" to authorize a plant or plants on the Snake River between Marsing and Hagerman and on the Payette River.

"The power which can be generated by these potential hydro sites will be very expensive and will represent only a small portion of expected power requirements," the application said.

Applications for the hydro plants also will have to be filed with the Federal Power Commission, which the company noted now has an average lead time of at least two years for licensing.

To help meet load requirements in the early 1980s until the coal-fired plant can be built, Idaho Power also expected to request permission for either simple or combined-cycle turbines to be ready for service in 1980 or 1981.

Such turbines, fueled with either natural gas or oil, would take from 16 to 30 months to install, depending upon the type. The last in the series of cycle turbines operates on the waste heat created to turn the turbine which generates electricity.

Idaho Power officials said because the earliest possible completion date for the $600,000,000 coal-fired generating plant would be 1982, these additional sources of power are necessary.

"1982 would be two years after shortages are expected to begin, according to the best projections made by the company and other experts based on median water conditions," the application said.

Lipizzaner breed 400 years old

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News writer

FILER — Magic Valley residents get an opportunity to see the famed Lipizzaner horses tonight.

A two-hour show at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds at Filer opens at 8, featuring the performing Lipizzaner or Lipizzaner horses.

Gary Lashinsky, who directs the traveling horse show, said the horses are the same that have delighted fans in Madison Square Garden, the San Francisco Cow Palace and other large cities around the country.

Known as the "dancing horses," the Lipizzans are native to Austria where they were used some 400 years ago by the country's royalty. They were often ridden by the leaders of the Austrian army and their unusual maneuvers helped to overwhelm the enemy in battle.

Horses featured in the Filer show have been bred for their ability to perform and are trained in the Spanish Riding School. Each rider has also undergone nearly as much training as the horses and the rider and horse perform almost as one, Lashinsky explains.

The large, white Lipizzaner stallions are born black or dark brown, and mature slowly. Unlike the American Thoroughbred that is on the track at 2 years of age, the Lipizzan is not ridden until he is 4 years old. Training usually is complete by the time he is about 8, so most of the show horses are aged animals.

The oldest in the touring group is 15 although Lashinsky says the group includes a 24-year-old stallion. He can be shown although he has been retired for breeding purposes.

In addition to the Lipizzaners, the show includes an equally large and talented horse, the Spanish Andalusian, some Thoroughbreds, Arabians, American Saddle-bred and even Apollos.

There are several mules and ponies performing in comedy acts and Lashinsky says the troupe includes Chief Bear, the Apollos who puts on the most authentic "drunk horse" act in show business.

The horses headquarters in Charleston, W. Va., where they spend about half of the year in intensive training.

The remaining half of the year is spent performing around the world. This is the eighth year for the tours in the United States. Last year they also flew to South America where they performed in several countries.

George Zitek, head trainer for the animals, is one of about 25 persons who travel with the horses.

"Each horse has at least one full-time man working for him," Lashinsky says.

The precision dressage maneuvers performed by the horses are done to music, generally on tape with narrations for each act. There will be individual performances by some of the animals as well as groups of two, three, four and five working in the arena at one time.

Tickets for the show may be purchased at the fair grounds Friday night at the grandstand gates or in advance at the County Seat in Twin Falls.

Wings to shuffle

BOISE (UPI) — A shuffle of fighter wings is going to leave the Mountain Home area short 18 houses the Air Force and Mountain Home cannot fulfill.

Col. John L. Pickett, commander of the 36th Tactical Fighter Wing at Mountain Home AFB, told a Boise luncheon club Thursday the base's military population will grow by 436 and its military dependents by 581.

He said Federal Housing Authority has contracted to supply 56 rental housing units to military personnel and their families but a dispute between the Air Force's contractor has put the housing on hold.

In the fighter wing shuffle, F11F aircraft transferred to England from Mountain Home and are being replaced by F111A and E aircraft from Las Vegas, Nev.

Castro planned raid on US

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Columnist Jack Anderson reported today that Fidel Castro plotted in 1969 to raid Richard Nixon's vacation home at Key Biscayne Bay, Fla.

According to Anderson, the Cuban premier's plan called for frogmen to blow up the President's Florida house. But the columnist said it was not known if Castro expected to stage the raid while Nixon was there and kill him in the attack.

Anderson said he learned details of the alleged plot from "intelligent sources" after the State Department announced that a Cuban at the United Nations had been asked to leave the country in connection with a matter related to the "security of the office of the President."

The Cuban, Lazara Eddy Espinosa Bonet, sought to recruit a Cuban-American servant inside the "Nixon compound" to install listening devices and to provide drawings of the security provisions, Anderson said.

"Our intelligence sources speculated that the raiders would have sought first to blow up the communications complex inside the Nixon compound," Anderson wrote. "Then, presumably, they would have struck the Nixon home."

Although Espinosa Bonet threatened the servant and his family in Cuba "with physical harm," said Anderson, the man refused to betray Nixon and reported the plot of U.S. authorities, resulting in Espinosa Bonet's ouster from the United States.

"It should be emphasized," Anderson wrote, "that the raid was a contingency plan and that no known attempt was made to implement it."

Manned shuttle to soar

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (UPI) — All systems were "go" today for the first manned playback test flight of the Space Shuttle-Orienter, a cargo and personnel spacecraft of the future which will fly into orbit and back to earth again.

It is the first space vehicle ever designed to be re-usable.

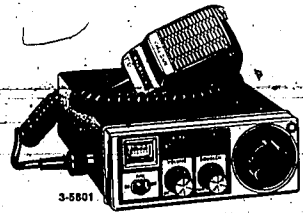

The first in a series of four test flights, manned and operative but still bolted to the back of a jumbo jet, was set for a racetrack-shaped flightpath over this desert air base at 12:15 a.m. EDT.

Today's flight of 49 minutes was to go as high as 15,000 feet and as fast as 207 miles per hour over the 4.4-mile elliptical course. Two astronauts, Fred Haise and Gordon Fullerton, were to be aboard today.

The 150,000 pound wide-wing space ship, riding on top of a Boeing 747, was being tested for instrumentation as well as flight capabilities. An earlier series of five unmanned flights sent the Orienter into the air on the back of the 747, but without instruments.

The series was so successful that the last in the planned series of six flights, was canceled.

Two dead after S. African riots

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Riot police fired into crowds of black rioters rampaging through townships outside Port Elizabeth today in a second day of rioting which has taken a toll of 2 blacks dead and at least 18 persons wounded in South Africa.

Brig. J. Hugo said "rampaging mobs" set fire to a number of buildings and stoned vehicles in the Kaba and Kwanobuhle black townships of the southern port city.

Hugo said police "were forced to open fire in both townships" but had no details of today's casualties.

In Kaba Township, two blacks were burned to death Thursday when rioters set fire to two shops, three schools and two liquor stores, police said.

About half of Soweto's 800,000 workers were complying with a call for a strike Thursday and today in memory of the more than 600 persons killed in last year's riots, which began in Soweto and spread to the whole nation.

Police said advancing groups of stonethrowers in Soweto forced them to use their handguns, rifles and buckshot-loaded shotguns. They wounded eight youths between the ages of 15 and 19 and a 47-year-old man.

In the black Kaba suburb of Port Elizabeth, 700 miles southwest of Johannesburg, police wounded with buckshot two looters plundering a liquor store. One was hospitalized in critical condition and the other escaped, police said.

Port Elizabeth divisional commissioner, Brig. P. J. Hugo, said his men "were subjected to vigorous attacks from all sides" by rioters and looters in Kaba and "were forced to shoot."

Police reinforcements equipped with riot gear and armed with shotguns, machineguns and automatic rifles had been mustered in many black ghettos because of the anniversary of last year's riots.

Witnesses said the attack appeared "unprovoked," but Soweto police chief Jan Visser said his men were forced to fire when they came under a heavy barrage of rocks.

Space scientist Von Braun dead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Werner von Braun, the German-born scientist whose rockets rained terror on London and sent Americans to the moon, died of cancer of the colon Wednesday morning, hospital officials said today. He was 65.

The sources said he died in nearby Alexandria, Va., Hospital after a long illness. The funeral was Thursday and attended by his family and a few close friends.

Von Braun lived at a time when rocketry evolved from backyard experiments to a standard means of transportation. He was at the forefront when rocketry achieved status as a tool of peace as well as a weapon of war.

He led the team that developed the rocket that orbited America's first satellite. And later, von Braun became known as the "father of the Saturns" that launched Apollo moon explorers.

Von Braun retired from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in 1972 to become vice president of Fairchild Industries, Germantown, Md. But he remained as active as ever in promoting space.

Sources said von Braun's death was not disclosed until this morning because members of his family requested that the information be held private until they could leave town.

Dr. Alan Lovelace, acting administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said, "We feel a deep sense of personal loss at the passing of Dr. Werner von Braun, one of the world's outstanding pioneers in the field of space exploration."

Despite his falling health earlier this year, von Braun continued to encourage development of advanced space technology which he was confident would continue to open new vistas for man in space while enhancing life on Earth.

Concerned about lagging public interest in space, von Braun told Vice President Nelson Rockefeller April 21, that an active space program was essential for the nation to retain its technological leadership in the world.

Von Braun dreamed of sending rockets to the moon when he was a teenage astronomy student in Germany in the 1920s. He achieved that goal 42 years later.

His foresight first paid off for the United States in 1958. The nation was still smarting from the licking its pride took when Russia orbited the world's first artificial satellite, Sputnik 1, on Oct. 4, 1957.

Solar energy disappoints New England

By BAYNARD WEBSTER

BOSTON—A preliminary look at the nation's first large-scale test of the efficiency of home solar water heating indicates that solar energy is not yet economically competitive with other forms of energy in New England.

The interim assessment of the feasibility of solar water-heating equipment was made at the midway point of a four-year study being conducted in 100 homes of different types of off-the-shelf equipment.

The 100 participating families, selected from 5,200 applicants, have for the last year been using solar water heaters installed under the supervision of the New England Electric System, the parent utility that operates power companies in the three states.

Speaking at the preliminary assessment conference here at the Museum of Science, spokesmen for New England Electric and Arthur D. Little, Inc., the industrial research concern, and solar energy specialists, reported that the total average energy saving in the 100 homes was only 17 per cent. The 15 best systems averaged a 37 per cent energy saving, with the worst 15 averaging less than 5 per cent.

These figures differ dramatically from the assertions of most manufacturers of solar energy water-heating units, who have advertised savings of 50 per cent or more in energy costs to the consumer. The figures also differ from some estimates presented several months ago by the Federal Energy Research and Development Administration, which proclaimed that solar water heating was now economically competitive with electricity in some Middle Atlantic states.

The $500,000 project, which was underwritten by New England Electric, is the first residential solar water-heating test program to be scientifically monitored on a large scale that included joint company-consumer participation.

The significance of the findings, which will be more comprehensively analyzed in 1979 after two more years of using the equipment, are expected to be eagerly mulled over by the proponents of solar energy, which has been held out to be part of the solution of the energy crisis by the year 2000.

The study is being conducted in an area of sunlight and freezing winter climate similar to that of the broad Northern section of the United States, an area that contains from one-fifth to one-fourth of the country's population. The reasons for the relatively poor performance of the solar heating units were announced as mostly things that could be corrected without too many problems on the designing board, by the installer, or by better maintenance methods.

Malfunfunction of a major nature occurred in 50 per cent of the units installed, John R. Stevens, vice president of New England Electric, reported. Most of them resulted from such things as air locks in water pipes, improper fittings, putting circulator pumps in backward, faulty wiring, settling timers so the unit worked only at night, equipment breakdowns and leaks in pipes because of inadequate insulation.

Martin Giesek of Arthur D. Little said that the problems were relatively "mundane, undramatic and most of them, assuming a little better design, could be solved by a plumber."

But Stevens asserted that the underlying causes of poor performance were perhaps more important than the actual breakdowns. Beneath the failures, he said, were problems of inadequate design, limited technical experience of the installers and maintenance personnel, and inadequate performance testing before placing the equipment in the marketplace.

The utility customers who were selected for installation of the units had to meet several criteria. They had to have a single-family house that had shade-free southern exposure with space for exterior solar collectors on their roof or outbuildings, and space for a storage tank and piping in the house. They also had to agree to contribute a token $200 toward the $2,000 average cost of a unit. They were permitted to keep the units at the end of the project.

"We've had some angry customers who got some heaters that didn't work well," said Stevens, "but we're replacing the worst units with better ones and we haven't had a dropout yet."

The installed units, made by more than a dozen manufacturers whose names were not disclosed, consist of solar collector panels that heat the water, pipes to an insulated hot water tank, the tank itself a small pump to circulate the water, and an auxiliary electric resistance heater in the tank to heat the water at night or during periods when there is little or no sunlight.

The cost of the units ranged from $1,550 to $2,100, Stevens said. The average size of the collector installations was 50 square feet. All units were installed in existing structures.

The interim findings in the test-of these installations is by no means proof of the failure of solar energy," Stevens said. "But they indicate how far we have to go and what we have to learn. The greatest potential threat to the rapid development of solar heat as a viable energy source is the fact that energy from the sun is the victim of unreasonable expectations."

Cubs keep winning without millionaires

New York Yankee baseball slugger Reggie Jackson drives a Rolls Royce.

So does Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench.

The Atlanta Braves paid Gary Matthews $100,000 a year for five years, plus a $125,000 bonus to sign, an off-season job worth $50,000 and a new car every year to play for them.

It's all part of the new, expensive brand of baseball now being played in many American ballparks.

Last winter, 13 major league baseball players signed contracts worth $1 million a year or more.

Quite a change from the days of Mickey Mantle whose biggest salary was $100,000. Even that came only at the end of a glorious career.

Roger Maris, the all-time homerun hitter for a single season, never earned even $80,000 a year.

And Maris, unlike today's heroes, didn't get a huge retirement pension after his baseball days were over. Instead, he's driving a beer truck in Florida to make ends meet.

Today, the fans help pay for the higher-priced brand of baseball. The cost of tickets at more than half the stadiums across the country went up this year.

In light of these developments, a few words of praise are in order for a club which has avoided the rush to sign the big names for big bucks—but still wins.

The Chicago Cubs, picked to finish last in the eastern division of the National League, rest comfortably on top of the heap, five games ahead of their nearest rivals.

The Cubs don't have a big name player like Reggie Jackson or Johnny Bench, but they have a winning combination built on teamwork.

Cub pitcher Rick Reuschel became the first hurler of the season to win nine games Wednesday—the same day Tom Seaver grabbed the national headlines and a hefty salary for being traded by the New York Mets to the Cincinnati Reds.

Seaver got the headlines but the Cubs continued their winning ways in the box scores.

The Cubs haven't won a national league pennant for 32 years. Their fans, loyal but never hopeful of a championship team, suddenly see a glimmer of World Series glitter.

If the Cubs manage to hold onto their division lead and scrape their way into the World Series, the faith of many baseball fans would be renewed.

The Cubs are winning with the names like Reuschel, deJesus, Cline, and Morales. They aren't millionaires. But they play the game of baseball with the best of them.

Angolan coup knits ties with Cuba

By DAVID ADAMSON

London Telegraph

LONDON—The unsuccessful coup mounted against President Agostinho Neto, of Angola on May 27 has had the effect of deepening the military and political ties between the regime and its Cuban backers.

To confirm his commitment, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro sent his brother Raul, vice president of the Cuban state council, to Luanda.

It was emphasized that he spoke "particularly" on behalf of the island's revolutionary armed forces, and he repeated the Cuban decision to help the Neto regime was "irrevocable."

The regime still is extremely jittery after an internal revolt in which the Portuguese Communist Party appears to have been involved.

In a eulogy for the victims, Neto went out of his way to praise the Soviet Union as well as the Cubans for its support.

However, he hinted at differences with the Russians in a sentence in which he said, "The comrades of the U.S.S.R. have expressed, at all the difficult times in our life, their feelings, but have in a practical and positive way contributed to the promotion of our army, to reducing economic difficulties."

Neto's enthusiasm for the Cubans went all out. Their contribution was "so wonderful that we shall never again in our national life forget it."

Saccharin ban tried once in 1911

By STEPHEN PARKHURST

Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Saccharin users, take heart.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) wants to ban most uses of the chemical by mid-July. But it history is any guide, it will never happen.

Item: "Saccharin cannot be used in foodstuffs sold in the United States after July 1 next." Read like last month's newspaper headlines? Well, that sentence led a newspaper story in April, 1911.

"Eminent pure food experts have decided that its (saccharin's) continued use is deleterious to health, and under the authority of the pure food law the Secretary of Agriculture . . . (has) issued an order against its use after July 1," said the 1911 story.

Saccharin never was banned, of course. What happened to the proposal 66 years ago? It went the way the current proposed ban is likely to go—to court.

The FDA has more than a mere passing dislike for saccharin, according to historian James Harvey Young. Ever since the first Pure Food and Drug Act was passed by Congress in 1906, the artificial sweetener has been near the top of the FDA's hit list, says Young.

Harvey Washington Wiley, father of the 1906 act and first head of the FDA, was convinced the new law could be interpreted to lead to prohibition of artificial substances in processed foods.

His attitudes conflicted with businessmen, who during the campaign year of 1908 used their political clout to gain a meeting with President Theodore Roosevelt.

Wiley recalled in his memoirs that during the meeting he and other federal officials outlined the danger of a type of chemical.

The President seemed convinced by the argument and told the assembled businessmen, "If this drug is injurious you shall not put it in foods."

One of the businessmen then said, "But Mr. President, how about this saccharin. My firm saved $4,000 last year by using saccharin instead of sugar."

"Unfortunately," Wiley recalled, saying, "Yes, Mr. President, and everyone who eats these products is deceived, believing he is eating sugar, and moreover the health is threatened by this drug."

"Turning upon me, in sudden anger and fierce visage, the President said: 'Anybody who says saccharin is injurious is an idiot. Dr. Wiley (Roosevelt's personal physician) gives it to me every day.'"

Wiley was rebuffed and Roosevelt soon established the Referee Board of Consulting Scientific Experts, as requested by the food industry, to oversee government attitudes on chemical additives.

But saccharin proponents still had a fight on their hands.

Several European nations banned the chemical or limited its use. And the experts gathered on the Referee Board found that large quantities of saccharin taken over long periods, was "liable to induce disturbances of digestion."

They also discovered, by relatively crude testing, that saccharin was excreted from the kidneys chemically unchanged. "The continued pouring of a foreign body of this kind, which must have active properties, through the delicate cells of the kidneys cannot fail in time to produce serious disturbance of function and even fatal disease," wrote the still-battling Wiley after the board completed its study.

Hence, the proposed ban of 1911. But before it took effect, lawyers for the Monsanto Chemical Works of St. Louis and other companies producing the sweetener won a delay. The court battle began.

World War I delayed a jury trial which finally began in 1919 after the FDA cited Monsanto for "adulterating" food with saccharin, which Monsanto called "the perfect sweetener" and "positively harmless."

After a long trial in which a parade of eminent physicians gave contradictory evidence, seven jurors agreed with the government, but five did not. A mistrial was declared.

The government tried again in 1924, with exactly the same results: Seven jury members favored conviction, five did not.

The FDA was beaten, though it continued to maintain in a non-binding code that food and drink containing saccharin were "adulterated."

The next development in the saga was enactment of the 1938 Food Additives Amendments. A section of the law states: "No additive shall be deemed to be safe if it is found to induce cancer when ingested by man or animal, or if it is found, after tests which are appropriate for the evaluation of the safety of food additives, to induce cancer in man or animal."

The language is called the Delaney Clause, after its author, U.S. Rep. James J. Delaney, D-N.Y., now chairman of the House Rules Committee.

The FDA announced its new proposed ban March 9, based upon the Delaney Clause and lab tests by the Canadian government which showed that rats fed high dosages of saccharin suffered an increased incidence of bladder tumors. In the tests, two generations of rats were fed enough saccharin to constitute 5 per cent of their diet. Three per cent of the rats in the first generation developed bladder tumors, and the rate was 15 per cent in the second generation.

Two per cent of rats not receiving saccharin also developed tumors in a "control" group where all other lab conditions were alike.

The tests have been criticized by those who point out that humans would have to drink 800 twelve-ounce cans of diet soft drinks each day to ingest an equivalent dose of saccharin.

Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Mo., called the tests "ridiculous" and said anyone drinking even a small part of this amount, "would die of gas before they would die of cancer."

But the new chief of the FDA, Donald Kennedy, has defended the tests.

"The exposure of test animals to high doses is the only valid way we know to predict whether a chemical may cause cancer in people," he said. "Such tests are both realistic and reliable" and "essential" in discovering if a chemical causes cancer in 1 of 20,000 people, he said.

Public hearings will be held May 18 and 19 "to make absolutely certain that consumers, medical experts, regulated industry and all others with an interest in our decision have a full and fair opportunity to express their view," Kennedy said.

The proposed ban would take effect on three dates. Elimination of saccharin from foods and beverages would be required upon signing of the final regulation. FDA officials suggest this could happen by mid-July.

The ban on saccharin in ingestible cosmetics would be required 30 days later, and the ban on its use in drugs would take effect 15 months after the initial ban.

Saccharin could be sold as a non-prescription drug with the following proposed labeling: "For use as a non-caloric sweetener when a sugar-restricted diet is medically indicated, as in patients with diabetes."

A warning would be included: "Causes bladder cancer in animals. Use of saccharin may increase your risk of cancer."

Such a proposed ban does not appeal to saccharin producers. "The Caloric Control Council representing producers and consumers of saccharin will take whatever action is necessary to put before the public the scientific facts on saccharin," said Robert Kellen for the saccharin industry funded group.

The makers of Sweet 'N Low are more direct. If a ban is imminent: "There's no question about it, we would go to court, and we'll take it right up the ladder to the Supreme Court if necessary," said Marvin Isenstadt, executive vice-president of the New York company.

Isenstadt may not have to bicker. Several members of Congress are attempting to write legislation which would change the Delaney Clause to allow the FDA to weigh the benefits versus the risks to humans of a potential cancer-causing agent before deciding to ban it.

The FDA now has no choice under the current law.

The history of saccharin's survival in the American marketplace would suggest the current law is more likely a candidate for extinction in coming months than is commercial use of saccharin.

Teddy outside

In Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter's Washington, softball games, public schools and Sunday church services are in. Formal dinners and fancy French wines are definitely out.

And the Kennedys, once the social prescriptors of the capital are now passive.

"Teddy Kennedy, who used to be one of the most powerful leaders of the Democratic party, will be lucky if he gets invited to the White House in the first six months of this Democratic administration," says one Carter aide in Redbook magazine. "If we didn't need him to get elected, what do we need him for now?"

Many are disgruntled by the new tone of Capitol Hill these days. Says one society reporter: "Going to a White House party is about as exciting as going to a P.T.A. meeting."

Nowadays, White House parties begin promptly at 7:30 p.m., and everyone goes home by 11 p.m.

The Carters have even forbidden reporters to mingle with the guests. The press is herded aside to view the arrivals, then ushered to an auditorium to listen to the toasts—which are piped in—then finally led upstairs to stand in the back of the room and watch the after-dinner entertainment.

Nez Perce mark anniversary of battle

LAPWAL, Idaho (UPI) — The proud Nez Perce Tribe, whose chief, Joseph, and many warriors, were among many of the most celebrated in Native American history, are commemorating the 100th anniversary of the last Indian war in United States history this weekend.

Tribal Chairman Alan Slick-poo said the battle of White Bird, which started the War of 1877, began on June 17, 1877, a month after non-treaty Indians were given thirty days to move all their possessions to a reservation along the Clearwater River near Kamiah in north-central Idaho.

Chiefs Joseph and White Bird and their followers, who lived in the Salmon River area and had not signed the treaty of 1863, which reduced the size of the reservation to 784,999 acres — or about one-tenth the size of the original reservation.

Joseph and White Bird did not believe in majority rule, but in the separate rule of the bands which collectively comprised the Nez Perce Tribe.

Four days before the battle of White Bird, some young braves killed some settlers in the Salmon River Canyon area.

This touched off the war and led to the calling of troops to force the Indians onto their newly delimited territory.

Army Col. David Perry's troops marched into the White Bird Hill area believing they were going to do battle with the Indians. Instead, they were ambushed and more than one-third of them died.

There were no recorded Indian casualties.

Joseph, the chief of chiefs, then began a 1,300-mile attempt to reach Canada. The march has been marked by history as one of the most remarkable military classics.

At night, the warriors would avoid alarmists by routing several thousand horses, cattle, women and children around military troops, sometimes battling the troops.

on grounds they chose and under conditions they chose. U.S. Cavalry losses were great. But in the end the stepped-up communications of the telegraph system were the Indians' undoing.

But for four months, the Indians inflicted several defeats on U.S. troops and suffered heavy losses while trying to make it to Canada.

Finally, hungry and freezing, Joseph surrendered on Oct. 5, 1877, at Bear Paw, Mont., where he made his now famous surrender speech.

It said, in part, "From where the sun now stands, I will fight no more forever."

He kept his word and the last Indian War ended four months after it began.

Nez Perce Tribal Chairman said weekend activities were to include a sacred pipe ceremony at White Bird hill, as well as a roll call of White Bird Battle chiefs and warriors.

Memorial dancing, a ceremonial feast and ceremonial dancing would highlight the weekend encampment, which was to draw Nez Perce tribal members from throughout the nation.

Hollifield alone in backing local option income taxes

BOISE (UPI) — Four state legislators hushed on a panel before the Association of Idaho Cities in Boise Thursday indicated that local-option taxing was "not generally favored by the lawmaking body."

Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, was the only legislator who came out flatly in support of personal income tax as an alternative to property taxes.

Sen. Phil Batt, R-Idaho, said he was "personally opposed" to personal income taxation "it could be uniformly collected" but added "I think it's out of the question."

He said a proper formula would be "very difficult to implement."

Possible gasoline, liquor by-the-drink, hotel-motel could comply with the courts in equalizing funding over schools.

"Any other taxing option would 'only add on to an already inequitable tax structure to begin with,'"

Sen. Phil Batt, R-Idaho, said although he was "personally opposed" to personal income taxation "it could be uniformly collected" but added "I think it's out of the question."

He said a proper formula would be "very difficult to implement."

Possible gasoline, liquor by-the-drink, hotel-motel

taxing, or county sales taxing alternatives did not receive good reviews by the legislators.

Batt said the legislature takes a "jaundiced look" at local option taxing because it "has a potential for upheaval and nonuniformity."

Calling for more study on the subject, Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, said, "This thing is so complex that whenever you make what looks like a simple little change it has a tremendous impact."

Max Yost, executive manager, Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, urged the city leaders to streamline their expenditures and "be certain all cuts are made" before "looking for more taxes."

"Do not cloud the structure with bills and pieces of taxes and don't try to couple the people in the name of tax reform — call it what it is," Yost said.

By United Press International. Although Benjamin Franklin is generally credited with organizing America's first fire department, in 1659 — 17 years before Franklin was born — Peter Stuyvesant levied a tax on the citizens of New Amsterdam for 250 buckets along with ladders and hooks.

Water projects approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four Idaho water projects have been approved for funding by a Senate subcommittee, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Thursday.

The Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Public Works okayed $600,000 for preliminary work on the new Lewiston-Clarkston Bridge, he said.

An appropriation of $1.5 million received the committee's vote for site selection work for four proposed fish hatcheries in the state.

A $210,000 appropriation was approved for the Big Wood water management study and $152,000 was sanctioned for the Upper Snake River study.

The $4.4-million study was given on $5.4 million for continued construction work on the Dwarshak Dam near Orofino and $465,000 for more work on the the Ririe Dam, McClure said.

The committee approved $300,000 for construction of marina facilities at American Falls. McClure said the project had to be undertaken this fall when the old American Falls Dam was breached and the water drained to a low level.

McClure said the House of Representatives has passed the funding bill and he does not expect conflicts in the Senate.

Basques close to autonomy?

BOISE (UPI) — Basques in Spain may be only months away from achieving autonomy, Idaho Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa said Thursday.

In a telephone conversation with his office, Cenarrusa, who is vacationing in the Basque province of Europe, said Basque leaders predicted that following recent elections in Spain, a special form of autonomy could be granted before Christ mass.

Cenarrusa said the leaders feel since the election they have the votes for a coalition with other provinces to achieve autonomy. He said they cite firm evidence that an initiative for Basque autonomy has come down directly from King Juan Carlos.

Basque autonomy was repressed for 40 years under the Franco rule, Cenarrusa said, adding since his death three years ago "conditions have changed measurably."

Church to back low-head generators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Thursday he will press for location in Idaho of a demonstration project using advanced low-head hydroelectric generators.

Church said the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Public Works has voted $5 million for the coming year for the project.

Church said the case for locating the project at Idaho Falls is strengthened by the fact that ERDA just signed a contract with the city to allow the cost of a study on the feasibility of using the new technology at the city's hydro plants. He said that study will cost about $400,000, of which ERDA will pay up to $198,000.

"Idaho Falls is an ideal location for a demonstration project," Church said. "The dams are in place, as well as supporting facilities. It's been estimated that bulb turbines at the city's plants could boost generation from 6,000 kilowatts to as much as 20,000 kilowatts."

Trudeau welcomed by family

OTTAWA (UPI) — With laughter, hugs and kisses, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was welcomed home from London by his three sons Thursday while wife Margaret stood by quietly. It was the Trudeau's first appearance together since they separated May 27.

Trudeau, 57, appeared surprised to be greeted by his entire family on his return from the Commonwealth Prime Minister's Conference in London. He strode quickly toward them — Justin, 5; Sacha, 3, and 1-year-old Michel — and swept the three boys up in his arms. Margaret, 29, stood quietly smiling a few feet away.

The prime minister then exchanged a few words on the airport tarmac with his estranged wife, who is pursuing a career as a photographer. Margaret, now living in New York, stayed here with the children while Trudeau was abroad, but the couple left the airport in separate cars — and separate directions.

Billy Carter to tap 1st keg

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Billy Carter will throw out the first ball at tonight's Cleveland Indians game with the Detroit Tigers. He'll train for the event by tapping the first keg for the annual Beer Night promotion.

Carter will appear at the team's downtown gift shop and ceremoniously open a three-hour bash at Clevelander Commons garden before the Tribe meets the Tigers. The ball club also has ordered a ton of peanuts to be distributed free. The peanuts are from Virginia, not Plains, Ga., but the President's irrepressible brother appointment won't mind. He'll be paid an estimated $5,000 to $10,000 for his appearance — and presumably all the beer he can drink.

Prince denies wedding plans

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, denied Friday a newspaper report that he was planning to announce his engagement to Princess Marie Astrid of Luxembourg.

The Friday edition of the London newspaper Daily Express said the couple's formal engagement would be announced from Buckingham Palace Monday.

Queen Elizabeth's press secretary Ronald Allison said early Friday, "I am authorized by the Prince of Wales to make the following statement: 'There is no truth at all in the report that there is to be an announcement of an engagement of the Prince of Wales to Princess Marie Astrid of Luxembourg.'"

Earlier, a Palace spokesman had said "As far as I am aware, there is no plan for any announcement about Prince Charles on Monday or at any time."

"The Prince may have met Princess Marie Astrid formally at an official reception. But it would have only been the most cursory of meetings."

Last March, the London newspaper Daily Mail predicted that Charles would marry Marie-Astrid. At that time, the Daily Express carried a denial of the report by a spokesman for Prince Charles.

Rosalynn receives praise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate officially praised First Lady Rosalynn Carter for her "brilliant display of knowledge about sensitive issues" in her recent tour of Latin America.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., said Thursday after the Senate passed a resolution praising Mrs. Carter and the President. "Often the spouse of a person in public life is relegated to purely ceremonial functions and noncontroversial speeches. Serious issues have traditionally been left to the diplomats and major political figures."

He added, "Rosalynn Carter has broken that tradition with a brilliant display of knowledge about sensitive issues and the ability to convey our country's greatest concerns effectively and tactfully."

Speed trap tip upheld by court

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The Court of Appeals, New York's highest court, has ruled that a Citizens Band radio operator cannot be arrested for warning other motorists of a speed trap.

Using CB slang in an opinion accompanying the unanimous decision, Judge Lawrence Cooke said, "To say that there is a 'smoke' takin' (sic) a picture up the road does not subject the speaker to a year's imprisonment."

"Smoke" means trooper in CB parlance. "Takin' a picture" refers to radar.

The high court held that to support a charge of obstruction of governmental administration, the obstruction of a policeman's work must be by means of "intimidation, physical force or interference, or by means of any independently unlawful act."

State police said Thursday's decision will have little impact on efforts to control speeding. A trooper involved in an experimental program using CB sets in patrol cars contends that "Smoke" reports are like having a trooper every 100 feet.

Symbol change set

ALAMOSA, Colo. (UPI) — The Adams State College football team still will be known as the Indians, but no one on the squad will be wearing the "scalp" of the week's award-for-outstanding play.

School spokesman Lloyd Swenson said a special committee has recommended that the Indian figurehead be retained as the symbol for Adams State, but in the future, the figurehead will be dignified.

That means that the "scalp" of the week's award will be eliminated, and a "pop" version of the Indian characterization no longer will appear on advertising and other material promoting school sports. Some students and faculty members had urged the symbol be dropped. Swenson, assistant to interim Adams State President John Turano, said a committee composed of faculty, staff and students studied the issue, but decided there was no reason for a change.

Swenson said American Indians living in the area did not object to the symbol and, in fact, said they were opposed to dropping it.

'Gator hunting — it helps make a living

LOWRY, La. (UPI) — Like most sensible men, Russell Gary doesn't particularly enjoy climbing into waist-deep water to face a 14-foot alligator. But he's got to make a living.

"I make about as much money hunting 'gators as I do driving my school bus," said Gary, who also runs a marina and traps nutria when he has the chance. "I couldn't really say I make my living at any one of them."

Alligator hunting has been legal for three years in the southwestern corner of Louisiana, where 'gators outnumber people more than two-to-one. The annual season begins in late August and runs through September.

Gary, who stands only 4-foot-10, has become one of the top hunters — bringing in more than $8,000 worth of skins last year.

"When I first started I didn't have nobody to show me how to do it right," Gary said. "I wasn't putting my lines out right to start with. Then the next season I started using clothes pins to hang my lines."

Gary, 52, uses small birds as bait. He attaches them to a rope at the end of a pole and hangs the bait just above the water surface in clothes-line fashion.

"You've gotta hang the bait out of the water or the crawfish will get to it," he said. "Then when the gator grabs the bait the rope holds him until I can get there."

The alligators are killed with a gun and then tossed into a boat for transfer to the Rockefeller Wildlife Refuge where the skins are auctioned.

It sounds simple, but there are times when a 115-pound hunter can have problems. "Sometimes you can't just walk them into the boat," Gary said. "You know after you kill them their leg muscles keep moving for about an hour. If you take your time you can walk them into the boat after they're dead."

"But even that falls occasionally.

Brother takes rap

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Patrick Balvin choked back tears as he told a Senate panel how his brother Mark gave a sleeping bag containing hidden weapons to their third brother Vincent to take to Mexico.

On arriving to meet his brother, Vincent was arrested by Mexican police for trafficking in the drug he did not even know was in the sleeping bag.

Months later, Balvin said, authorities disclosed they uncovered 90 milligrams — enough to turn on one user, once.

Vincent has been imprisoned since June, 1974, despite a desperate written plea from brother Mark to Mexican justice officials saying he, not Vincent, was guilty.

"Vince should not be made to pay for the mistake of his brother," Balvin told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Idaho pinch looms

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho probably will not feel the severity of the drought until the state's reservoirs dry up this fall, state and utility company officials said today.

"All of the reservoirs will be empty this fall," the Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Stephen Alfred told a sparsely attended session of the Association of Idaho Cities convention in Boise.

Ernest Lannam, Idaho Power Co. vice president, said, "The problem we see is we may get by this summer." If utilities can transport power into the state, "but we know the reservoirs are going to dry this fall and it's going to take a lot of water to fill them up."

"The voluntary curtailment has not shown up," but the company's contracts with utilities outside the state will need the water demands this summer.

Alfred said, "We went into this season with reservoirs 60 per cent to 100 per cent full," adding, the recent rains "didn't really do anything for the available water supply."

"The areas where we needed the rain we didn't get it," he said.

But the economic impact of water shortages "will probably not be overly severe" on a statewide level, Steve Seward, the governor's economic assistant, said "but we expect severe effects for some industries and persons."

Seward estimated state income losses at $113 million this year and spilling into next year, and personal income losses at $90 million, a decline of two percent.

Industry is expected to lose $25.7 million, he said.

The livestock industry is feeling the strain as herd liquidation continues. "In record numbers" in response for "poor range and high feed prices."

Estimated losses to the recreation industry, especially snow skiing-related businesses, was put at the $6 million mark.

"The drought probably won't hurt the state as a whole severely, but it will affect individuals and their lifestyles this year and for years to come," Seward said, adding that the "state losses are manageable."

Almanac

United Press International Today is Friday, June 17, the 168th day of 1977 with 197 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, was born June 17, 1703. This is also the birthdate of actors Ralph Bellamy (1903) and Dean Martin (1917).

On this day in history:

In 1928, Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean. She was a passenger aboard a plane piloted by Wilmer Stultz.

In 1967, mainland China announced it had detonated a hydrogen bomb.

In 1972, five men with cameras and bugging equipment were arrested in the "Watergate" headquarters of the Democratic National Committee in Washington, D.C., and charged with burglary. This was the beginning of the Watergate scandal.

In 1974, Herbert Kalmbach, President Nixon's former personal lawyer, was sentenced to six to 18 months in prison and fined $10,000 for illegal election fund raising.

A thought for the day: Betty's pet Sir John is a pig. "Women are the baggage of life; they are troublesome, and hinder us in the great march," yet we cannot do without them.

$s talk to churchmen

Chicago Daily News

If a Roman Catholic pastor finds an oversized dollar bill in the collection basket with a picture on it of St. Therese of the Child Jesus, he should know it's from a supporter of women's ordination.

The errant currency will lie there instead of the kind with George Washington on it in protest of the church's position against women priests.

"Prayers speak to God. Dollars play a critical role in speaking to churchmen," says Sister Maureen Fiedler, R.S.M., of Mt. Rainier, Mo.

who designed the St. Therese dollar.

On the phony bill's flip side, there is room for the signature of the donating party under the inscription:

"To encourage the Church to celebrate the gifts and calls of women equally with those of men in all ministries, I am withholding one dollar from this collection."

The money is to be sent instead to Quivote Center in Mt. Rainier, which has sexual equality in church and society as "one of its major concerns," Sister Fiedler said.

Special music will be provided during each of the three programs. The public is invited to attend the programs.

Methodist camp memorial to honor Luther Koonce

FAIRFIELD — Volunteer workers are working on a new Methodist Church Camp Sawtooth north of here. A group of about 15 volunteers from Twin Falls, Wendell and Boise prepared the foundation concrete forms and utility line trenches during a "work party" at the camp this past weekend.

Additional weekend work sessions are planned to complete construction of the dispensary, which is being erected at the camp as a memorial to the late Luther Koonce of Gooding and Fairfield, who was for many years closely connected with the development of the camp.

When completed, the building will house a first aid station, sick bay, quarters for a camp nurse and quarters for the camp dean. Pouring of a concrete slab is anticipated in the near future, to be followed by erection of the walls, siding and roof. Camp sessions are scheduled to commence late this month and will continue through labor day.

The late Mr. Koonce served for many years as chairman of the committee administering the camp for the Oregon-Idaho Conference of the United Methodist Church. During that time, he was directly involved with the construction of several cabins to house campers, the Bishop's Cabin, and other facilities serving the camp.

Funds for construction of the dispensary have been contributed by churches throughout southern Idaho.

Tough issues face Missouri synod

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

If observers thought the excitement of the Lutheran Church-Missouri ended when moderates marched out of the denomination to form their own Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, they should think again.

The schism in Missouri has brought only a relative peace—perhaps Cold War—to the nation's second largest Lutheran denomination and when it meets in convention in Dallas next month (July 15-22) there will be almost as many tough and emotional issues as in the past.

They include:

- What to do about moderates who have stayed in the Synod in a group known as Evangelical Lutherans in Mission (ELIM). The group has been branded "schismatic" by past conventions.
- What to do about the new AELC. Some of the moderates left in the 2.7 million member church want to officially recognize the splinter AELC as a legitimate Lutheran group with which Missourians can exchange pulpits and with whom members could celebrate Holy Communion.

—What to do about its sister denomination, the American Lutheran Church. The two churches have been squabbling since the Missouri turmoil, with ALC leaders making no bones about the fact that they were favorably disposed to the moderate cause and concerned about Missouri "narrowing" its confessional base.

—The election of a president. Dr. J.A.O. Preus, who has presided during most of the fighting in Missouri, is a candidate for reelection but he faces challenges from both his left and right.

Indeed, Preus has been the center figure in the theological and power struggle in Missouri and anyone who seeks to understand Missouri's turmoil needs to have some understanding of Preus.

James E. Adams, religion editor of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, has probably done a better job of that than anyone standing outside the Synod—and many within.

His recently published "Preus of Missouri and the Great Lutheran Civil War" (Harper and Row) is easily must reading for anyone seeking to understand what has been going on in Lutheranism for the past decade.

Adams weaves together the strands of Preus' pre-Missouri Synod life (Preus began his career with a small Lutheran group popularly known as the Little Norwegian Synod) with the later unfolding of the schismatic drama in Missouri under his presidency.

In part, Adams sees Preus as—attempts to fulfill a contemporary prophetic role—to scourge the Synod of a perceived slide away from the historic Lutheran confession of "Sola Scriptura"—the Bible alone as the keystone to all Christian doctrine.

"Preus may well be the world's last medieval Lutheran who takes with fatalistic seriousness all the implications of the Reformation principle of "Scripture alone," for the Protestant church," Adams writes.

Within this framework, it is possible to see to theological struggle over the Bible in the Missouri Synod—and the political struggle for control of the denomination's administrative machinery—not only as a struggle for the "identity" of Missouri but as part of a larger struggle embracing much of Protestantism.

Preus has an indirect grip on an archetypal Protestant vision of a pax biblica, of a Christian empire self-regulated by biblical laws, of a kind of biblical natural law to which all non-Roman (Catholic) Christians could relate," Adams said.

It is, Adams notes in the conclusion to this excellent book, a dream Protestantism cannot dismiss "without cutting symbolically one link to the past."

'Little Bishop' to be first US saint

... 1854 photo

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — More than 100,000 pilgrims will throng St. Peter's Square Sunday to hear Pope Paul VI declare the "Little Bishop" of Philadelphia as America's first male saint.

The canonization climaxes a 91-year sainthood drive by the followers of Bishop John Neumann—the third American to be proclaimed a saint of the Roman Catholic Church.

Neumann died from exhaustion in 1860 on the streets of Philadelphia at the age of 48. Reports of miraculous cures soon appeared.

A shy, self-effacing man who stood only 5-foot-2, Neumann was considered such an unlikely candidate for sainthood that he almost missed joining the rolls of new saints marching into the Church this year.

In fact, Neumann's candidacy was held up for 10 years because the Vatican Congregation of Rites considered his life "too ordinary"—a series of everyday actions accomplished flawlessly but unexceptionally.

But in 1921, Pope Benedict XV overruled the Congregation, saying, "works, even the most simple, performed with constant perfection in the midst of inevitable difficulties, spell heroism in any servant of God."

Thus it was that John Neumann came to join Mother Frances Xavier Cabrini and Mother Elizabeth Ann Bayley Seton as the only three saints from the United States.

Neumann's efforts as a horseback circuit priest and English teacher in upstate New York have been credited with spreading the parochial school system throughout the United States.

Born March 28, 1811, in the village of Prachaltitz in what is now Czechoslovakia, Neumann originally wanted to become a doctor of medicine.

His Roman Catholic mother "was not too happy with this," Neumann said in an autobiographical sketch, and persuaded him to enter a theological seminary instead.

At the seminary, Neumann decided to become a missionary in the United States, and in 1836 set out for the New World without having been ordained and without an assignment.

The diocese of New York, filled with thousands of German immigrants and no priests who spoke their language, was thrilled to have him.

Within a month, he was ordained in the old St. Patrick's Cathedral on Mott Street and dispatched to a 900-square mile parish along the Erie Canal in upstate New York.

Neumann spent four years teaching English and religion in the log cabin schools he organized while administering on horseback to a parish that extended from Niagara Falls to Buffalo to Batavia.

In 1840, he contracted gastric fever, collapsed and finally quit his post as a lone missionary-pastor to join the Redemptorist Order.

Neumann went from Pittsburgh to Baltimore, for the Redemptorists, constantly working himself beyond his endurance, much to the concern of his superiors.

In 1851, Neumann's name was suggested to the Vatican for the vacant post of Bishop of Philadelphia—a candidacy favored by Rome because of the large number of German immigrants in the City of Brotherly Love.

Neumann considered himself an unsophisticated immigrant who lacked the qualities needed for a bishop and begged, with tears in his eyes for his nomination to be withdrawn.

The Vatican rejected his appeals and he went to Philadelphia, continuing his work with Catholic schools, building or beginning construction of 89 churches and instituting the Forty Hours devotion, a special devotion to the Eucharist.

On Jan. 5, 1860, a few weeks before his 49th birthday, Bishop Neumann died of exhaustion on the icy streets of Philadelphia.

A "motley crew" of "ragged outcasts and very humble citizens" with an infusion of colored little ones mobbed the church for Neumann's funeral, according to the Philadelphia Bulletin newspaper.

Within weeks of his death, stories of cures attributed to his intercession spread throughout the diocese.

Moved by the stories, a successor, Archbishop Patrick Ryan, began collecting evidence on his life in 1886.

Eleven years later Archbishop Ryan sent a preliminary report to the Vatican and Neumann was named a "Servant of God."

The start of the lengthy road to sainthood that ends Sunday when Pope Paul VI declares him a saint.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 18, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a good time to become too involved in some confusing condition or a discussion with any other for it could easily become a cause for separation or estrangement. Be careful you do not feel you are being imposed upon.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are resentful toward kin so quietly analyze the situation and do whatever will restore harmony at home. Alleviate those business pressures you are under.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get out of that despondent mood and make this an interesting instead of a dull time. Complete work accurately so you that you do not invite criticism of co-workers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Financial matters seem hard to handle but will not be if you put new and workable ideas in operation. Try to build up your savings account.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel depressed, but that is no reason to take it out on others. Improve conditions about you and soon perk up.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take care of intimate tasks, but use practical methods. Don't argue with mate or loved one or you invite trouble best avoided.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Friends could be in a poor mood and mood cheering up, so do just that and gain their goodwill now. Shop early, then think of entertaining.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may have desires and wishes that are not good for you, so study them well before going after them. Handle credit matters wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Analyze well every detail of any new enterprise you may have in mind. Make new contacts but accept only the best of these.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go ahead and make those rightful payments and stop quibbling about them and gain goodwill. Visit friends and relatives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have to use tact in handling problems today or there could be quarrels, hurt feelings. Don't aggravate one who opposes you or you will be the one to get hurt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) There're obstacles in the path of your work progress, but if you go around them carefully, you get much done. Not a good day to have talks with co-workers as you are apt to get poor results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) It's all right to go out for a good time, but don't spend money foolishly. Plan time for some special interest you understand very well.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be very conventional and should have education slanted along conservative lines. The field of merchandising is fine here. Teach early to consider the feelings of others and become a more popular, communicating person.

Historians say that was the first oyster cocktail. The miner talked to loud and long about how good it was that the bartender decided to sell the concoction for 50 cents a glass.

Q. "How can you stiffen nylon curtains?"
A. Mix a little cold water with one tablespoonful of gelatin. Add two quarts of boiling water. 3. Dip curtains while still wet from washing into gelatin solution. 4. Squeeze and wring out towel. 5. Iron while still damp but not wet. The stiffer the nylon, the better the curtains, the less water you use to make a solution.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old girl with lots of friends, and my problem is that guys are always hassling me because I don't want to have sex. Some of my girl friends say if I don't do it before I'm 16, I'll wind up being a lesbian. I can't say I'm afraid of getting pregnant because I could get the Pill or I could use some other method. Please give me some reasons that they will listen to. Thank you.

HASLED

DEAR HASLED: What's wrong with the truth? Tell them you do not want to get into sex now. And please don't feel that you have to explain or make apologies for your decision. MANY girls your age and older choose NOT to indulge in sex because they feel ill-equipped to handle it emotionally. I say, good for them. The worst reason for doing something is because you're afraid of what others might think. (P.S. And your friends who say, "If you don't have sex before you're 16, you'll wind up a lesbian" don't know what they're talking about.)

Teen seeks solution

DEAR ABBY: I saw an ad in a New York newspaper that read as follows: "Marijuana cannot be sold through the mails, but 'grass' can. Send $5 for a full quarter-ounce." I sent a $5 bill together with my name and address, and I received in return a quarter-ounce of LAWN CLIPPINGS! This is obviously a fraudulent scheme. How can I get my money back?

"HAD": FIRE ISLAND

DEAR HAD: I think you would be wise to write off as a "cheep lesson." Don't expect to find an honest dealer in a crooked deal.

DEAR ABBY: Our 14-year-old son is our problem. He has always been a good boy and a good student, but he is an introvert. He has no friends and claims he doesn't want any.

He is sarcastic and arrogant, shows no affection and seems to want none. He could be very good-looking, but over the years he has gained so much weight he now refuses to weigh himself. He pretends he doesn't care how he looks, and he continues to grow fatter.

We have begged and bribed him, but he doesn't listen. He's an only child, and it's breaking my heart. Please help me.

DETROIT

DEAR DETROIT: An obese child is an unhappy child who is asking for help. He's built a wall of fat around himself to keep others from getting close enough to discover his imperfections (We all have them). He needs professional help. Start with your family doctor, and don't put it off.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "PLEASINOLY PLUMP AT THE BANK": Your normal weight at age 25 should be your weight for the rest of your life. How does that grab you?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 63700, L.A. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb: I have a cure for a skin ulcer, which is the result of poor circulation. The ulcer is on the top of my husband's foot at the ankle area. He is a victim of strokes.

Dear Reader: What needs to be done depends entirely on what is causing the ulcer. I suspect from its location that it is caused by varicose veins. But from inadequate blood flow through the arteries to the foot. This is a critical disease the bottom of the foot or the toes are most often affected first.

Varicose veins of the ankle area are a complication of varicose ulcers. The best approach is to decrease the pooling of blood in the lower part of the foot by using support stockings or elastic bandages. Another solution is to have the arteries to the foot. This is a critical disease the bottom of the foot or the toes are most often affected first.

A good compromise is to wrap the foot or put on effective support hose before getting out of bed and then when sitting up keep the foot elevated as much as possible.

Give me more information about the treatment of varicose ulcers and the role of surgery in varicose veins I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-8. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

Dear Dr. Lamb: What exactly is cancer? What actually causes it?

Dear Reader: Our cells are capable of reproducing themselves. Your skin is a good example. The skin cells constantly produce new cells. The older cells migrate to the surface and are flaked off. The new cells replace the old skin.

A cancer is nothing more than the normal cell growth goes wild. Let's say it is a cancer of the liver. The liver cells involved become abnormal in that they rapidly reproduce and the new cells are different from the original cell structure of liver cells. Usually the greater the difference is the more malignant the cancer will be.

This cancer would be a primary cancer of the liver. If some of the abnormal cells are carried by the blood or lymph to distant parts of the body, they can start another area of cancer growth there. The cells in this new area will be similar or even identical to the cancer cells in the liver. This is a metastasis or spread of cancer. When a pathologist looks at the cancer tissue, regardless of where the tissue comes from he can usually tell where the original or primary cancer started.

We know there are many different things that can cause normal cells to become abnormal and start the wild growth pattern. Tars as found in cigarette smoke is one example. Radiation is another example. At least in some animal experiments virus infections can be a factor. Apparently anything that upsets the cell's normal reproduction cycle is capable of triggering cancer growth. That is why cancer may be several different diseases and may be caused by many factors.

Direct-response advertising

Reputable merchants vs. scoundrels

the blood pressure a couple of points.

And when this happens time after time, American consumers start casting a wary eye at anything they see promoted through direct-response (which includes mail order, coupon sales, telephone-in TV commercials, and merchandise offers enclosed in credit card bills.)

This isn't news to those in the direct-response industry. Even though the business is growing rapidly, they know that there are problems, and one is the number of charlatans in the industry. Every business has its share of fly-by-nighters and wheeler-dealers, but direct-response seems to have more than its share.

The customer isn't asking for much. He wants a fair deal on good merchandise, and he wants it delivered in a reasonable time. Most direct-response merchants are providing this.

But there is one very important thing they aren't providing. They haven't taken any positive steps to help the customer tell the difference between the reputable merchant and the scoundrel. There are two simple ways this can be done.

The first is by having all of the chiselers form an organization called the Disreputable Direct Marketing Association. Members would have to mention prominently in their advertising that they belong to this organization. Thus, the

A symbol of ethical purity, however, isn't enough. In order to qualify for this seal, each direct marketer should promise to adhere to a set of basic standards. For example, all products should be subject to a money-back guarantee. The marketers also should guarantee that the order will be filled within a specified and reasonable amount of time.

Customers should know that the advertising copy and illustration do not add up to a misleading description of the product. Companies allowed to use this seal also should provide the organization with some background about their finances and officers. Perhaps member companies could be covered by a special insurance policy guaranteeing that customers will not lose their money, even if the owners absconded or the company went bankrupt.

These are only a handful of suggestions based on experiences that other customers and I have had with the direct response industry. Many other details could easily be included in the same program, and I think it could be done at a relatively modest cost.

Unless my recommendations have fallen on deaf ears, I imagine that a few people in the direct-marketing business are considering them. Perhaps they will be implemented someday. Direct-marketing is at a crucial stage in its development because it faces an important choice: it can start policing itself now, or it can wait for the government to do the job.

Come to think of it, that's really no choice at all.

Every business has its share of fly-by-nighters and wheeler-dealers.

I recently appeared before the Chicago Assn. of Direct Marketing, the leading organization in its industry, and urged that it's time for them to improve their image. But I'm really not as interested in the industry's reputation as I am in the customers who get befuddled. This happens to be a case, though, where both irritations may be treated by the same soothing solution.

customer would know which offers to avoid.

There was little feeling among the audience that this was not particularly feasible. So I suggest that they do what the disreputable merchants won't. Form an organization and identify themselves through a trade-mark seal or symbol appearing in their advertising. This practice has been employed successfully for years by many professions and industries.

She's rarin' to go

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An 85-year-old great-grandmother from New Jersey is setting out on her second around-the-world flight, a $3,000 birthday present she gave herself because "I liked it so much the first time."

Anna Hirschberg, of Ridgewood, N.J., says she will be better prepared this time than she was in 1964 when she made her first globe-jirlling odyssey aboard a Pan American World Airways plane.

"I even took flying lessons last year to find out what flying is all about," she told UPI in a telephone interview on the eve of her departure today.

"Now that I am a great grandma and 85 years old, I want to fly around the world again before I pass on. I sure am rarin' to go. I love flying. I liked it so much the first time I want to go again."

Mrs. Hirschberg's journey was to begin with a flight from New York to San Francisco aboard an American Airlines jet.

In San Francisco late today she will change to Pan Am's Flight One, boarding a Boeing 747 temporarily renamed: the "Clipper Hirschberg" in her honor, for the rest of the trip — Tokyo, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Delhi, Tehran, Frankfurt, London and then New York.

She is scheduled to spend a total of about 56 hours in the air.

Most passengers will get off at one or another of the exotic stops along the way, but Mrs. Hirschberg said she intends to stay on the plane the whole time "watching people come and go." She'll be in the first-class cabin but has been reserved for her.

A dozen meals will be served during the flight — one breakfast, one brunch, two lunches, two dinners, two snacks, three suppers and one cold plate — but Mrs. Hirschberg said she does not intend to eat much of that fare.

"I'll live on tea and cheese," she said. "There's no point eating a lot of rich food when you're sitting and not doing much of anything. You feel better that way."

Mrs. Hirschberg said she'll pack an extra dress: loose and comfortable; and expects to make the trip in fine shape despite her age because "I'm in good health and I have never taken medicine my whole life."

The trump lead made it impossible for South to ruff two hearts in dummy. Every card was wrong in the side suits, yet South found a play for his contract in spite of the bludgeonings of chance. He won the lead in dummy, cashed the ace and king of hearts, ruffed a heart, drew trumps, led his last heart to catch East in an end play at trick seven.

East had done his best to avoid this by throwing the eight of clubs on the third trump lead so as to keep that fifth heart in his hand, but this did him no good at all. When East led that fifth heart, South just chuckled his singleton club.

Now if East led a diamond, South would lose just one diamond trick. If he led a club it would set up dummy's king and again South would lose just one diamond trick. Either way, South was sure of 10 tricks.

THE MAYERS, from left, Chantal, John Jr., and John Sr., stand outside the Valley Heart Restaurant in Obidian. The Mayers who own the restaurant are embroiled in court proceedings with the U.S. government over condemnation procedures the Forest Service has begun to possess the property.

Restaurant opens despite close order

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

OBIDIAN—Emblazoned on the front door of the Valley Heart Restaurant in the Sawtooth Valley is an orange and black bumper sticker saying "Save the Valley Heart From Federal Discrimination."

Inside the wayside restaurant on a small entrance lobby table is a register book with the same proclamation at the top of each page. Among the 1,000 signatures scrawled in the pages of the book are the autographs of celebrities Robert Redford, Katherine Ross and James Caan.

Last Saturday the Valley Heart Restaurant here in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (SNRA) opened for the summer season despite the fact a U.S. federal judge, in November, condemned the property and directed the U.S. Forest Service to take possession of the property.

John Mayer, the owner and operator of the Valley Heart, has for the past year been battling the Forest Service which condemned the restaurant under the "eminent domain" statute of the United States.

Under SNRA land use regulations, the area of Obidian west of U.S. highway 93 in the Sawtooth Basin was designated "agricultural" and in April, 1974, about 30 area landowners were told their properties didn't conform to the designation.

Trailer homes and summer cabins violated scenic and pastoral values which the SNRA had been created to preserve and protect, and the structures would have to be removed, the SNRA said. Mayer, a vocal opponent of the SNRA private land use regulations, has been fighting the Forest Service in an effort to keep his property. He purchased the Valley Heart in 1971 shortly before the creation of the SNRA and moved to live and work on it in 1972 from New York.

"I came here to retire and not to expire," Mayer says grimly, after having spent over $20,000 in legal fees to fight to keep his land. When negotiations with Mayer to purchase the property broke down, the Forest Service began condemnation of the property in federal court, according to SNRA Superintendent Gray Reynolds.

The Forest Service deposited $42,000, with the court, the amount the Forest Service felt was a fair price for the property; and then awaited the judge's decision.

But Mayer claims negotiations never really did break down. He says he has always been willing to negotiate and so the Forest Service's condemnation, which is a last step procedure, initiated only when no agreement can be reached, was unfair.

Voters reject override

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — School district voters resoundingly turned down an override tax Thursday which would have given teachers an additional $400 in base pay next year.

Failure of the override also means the school district will probably have to shave expenditures next year if it is to recoup the estimated $100,000 deficit with which it will end this year.

The election attracted a turnout of more than 2,000 voters who went to the polls to defeat the seven-mill override.

Those favoring the "special tax" hardly counted as they were outnumbered by more than three-to-one by opponents of the measure.

Unofficial results of the election showed 1,865 voting against the override, with 541 supporting it. Opponents of the tax made about 77 percent of those voting.

Observers at polling places said many of the voters were elderly persons who opposed the tax because of a lack of income to pay it.

One observer at the high school Thursday night said voters had an "average age of about 105."

Turnout was heaviest at the high school, where 752 of the total 2,406 voters cast ballots.

Defeat of the override disappointed teachers and augured ill for further negotiations between school board members and the Twin Falls Education Association (TFEA).

"Naturally, we're disappointed to say the least," said TFEA chief negotiator Dick Chilcote, "and we're also a little bit upset because of the reaction of some of the board members and the way it (the election) was sold to the public."

Chilcote said the district as well as the teachers needed the money which would have come from the override. The $325,000 which would have been raised by the override levy would have helped defray the school district's deficit as well as adding to teachers' salaries.

"I would say it's a show by the public that they didn't want that there would be the same problem with an override next year," Chilcote added.

He said the defeat of the override would make ensuing negotiations between the TFEA and the board more difficult.

"I think the board will now definitely remain firm on their stand that they will refuse to negotiate any further," Chilcote said. "Now they definitely can use the excuse they don't have any money, and that's the excuse they've been using all along."

Chilcote said the TFEA would "continue to try to persuade them (board members) to negotiate, yes."

Board chairman Howard Runk said his reaction to the election was "that the people have spoken, and we'll live with what they said."

"I think there is a better solution — a more permanent solution, I should say — than the override," Runk added. "I think those teachers deserve more money, but I am basically against the concept of an override."

Runk said whether holding the election, which cost the district about $2,500, was a waste of money, was "a matter of conjecture. . . . It certainly tested the waters of the feeling of the public. When this is the only way you could go, when you have no alternative, sometimes you have to do this."

Runk said the board might adjust its budget downward at a big opening for the new fiscal year to be held June 28. The board had approved a budget of $5.73 million assuming the override would succeed. Failure of the levy cuts the budget to an estimated $5.40 million and puts the axe to a hoped-for contingency fund which might have been used to offset this year's deficit.

Assistant superintendent Camden Mayers, who said he was taking the levy failure "in stride," said the district might recoup its deficit without the override if assessed valuation of the district was high and other income came in on the high side.

Hollister council pushes bond issue

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

HOLLISTER — The City Council is asking Hollister residents to approve a $50,000 bond issue June 28 to finance a new water system.

The bonds, to be paid off over about a 29-year period, would be sold to finance drilling of a new well on city-owned land close to the center of the population. Council member Mrs. Audrey Carter said the city proposes location of a new well on a site as yet undetermined, but one within a reasonable distance to replace the existing well three miles out of town.

Mrs. Carter said one of the problems is the three-mile line through which the water supply must travel to reach the city system. This reduces pressure and presents a maintenance problem on the line.

"We would not abandon the old well," Mrs. Carter said. "We would retain it for use in case we ever need it and would have an emergency supply of water."

A public meeting was held Tuesday night in Hollister and another is planned for the coming Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Hollister Grange Hall. At that time an explanation of bond issue and the proposal for improvement of the system will be presented to all interested property owners.

The mayor and council members say there would be no increase in taxes as a result of the bond issue. The bonds and estimated seven percent interest would be paid from water revenue. Mrs. Carter said the bonds would cover installation of water meters, a new feature in Hollister.

The city proposes a pumping capacity of at least 180 gallons per minute and the construction of a 60,000-gallon storage tank. The reservoir unit would be ground level and built of redwood frame structure. Necessary water transmission lines and connections as well as hydrants would be included.

In the Tuesday night meeting, engineers presented a report on ground water tables in the area.

"We think we would obtain a good supply of water at any one of the several sites. Our engineers tell us the new well should provide an adequate system for the next 20 years."

"We only have a one-mile-square city, so the system can't expand too much," Mrs. Carter said.

Mayor Charles Shepherd and other council members took action about a year ago to stop all further water hook-ups in Hollister because of the demands on the existing system.

Shepherd said building was increasing rapidly because of the trend toward rural living which brought a number of new families to the town and a number of new homes, all requiring water service.

Mrs. Carter said the council has been working for several years to find a solution to the situation which could be financed by so small a community.

"We are confident the issue will pass. I think we have the support of the people because the problem is so serious," she said. Mayor Shepherd is also in charge of keeping the city pump operational. If the pump fails, he said, the city is without water until it is repaired.

Voting June 28 will be from noon until 8 p.m. in the Hollister school building.

Harrah buys business

KETCHUM — Multi-millionaire William Harrah, owner of Harrah's Gambling Casino in Reno and Lake Tahoe, Nev., purchased his first business in the Ketchum-Sun Valley area this week.

Harrah, who earlier this winter bought a house in Sun Valley, reportedly for about $1.5 million, purchased a Sun Valley Volkswagen car sales and service dealership from Riviera Motors of California.

Harrah's executive assistant, Robert Hudgens, confirmed the sale and said this morning about Harrah's business acquisition here, "I'm sure it was offered to him and it was at the right price. I'm sure it was a business matter."

Hudgens declined to offer a sale price but an earlier newspaper story from the Ketchum weekly, "Tomorrow," quoted Harvey Ewing, executive vice president of Modern Classic Motors, a large Harrah-owned dealership in Reno, saying $250,000 "wouldn't be too far off including the real estate involved."

Cycle accident fatal

TWIN FALLS — A 36-year-old Ketchum man who suffered a tractor-trailer accident last week, died Thursday night in Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

State police say the man, William Otto Pritchard, failed to negotiate a turn while operating a motorcycle on State 50 about 4 1/2 miles southwest of Eden Saturday afternoon.

A hospital spokesman said Pritchard never regained consciousness after being knocked out in the accident.

Escape try foiled

TWIN FALLS — A 19-year-old Twin Falls man, arrested Wednesday for allegedly stealing $14 from a woman's purse, escaped and was re-arrested.

The man, Michael R. Tinker, originally charged with petit larceny, was in the city police station booking room when he attempted to escape by climbing into the station attic, Police Detective Capt. Tim Qualls said Thursday.

Tinker traveled along the rafters about 80 feet before being arrested as he tried to come down into the station records room, Qualls said.

Tinker, re-arrested on charges of attempting to escape and destruction of property, was being held in the city jail in lieu of $900 bond.

He was originally arrested after a woman reported a man took money from her purse while she was visiting Tinker's apartment.

Chairman selected

JEROME — Duane Butler, Jerome, has been named chairman of the Northside Multiple Listing Service for the coming year.

He succeeds Richard Gregory. Others elected include Louise McCormack, vice chairman and Rodney Pauls, secretary-treasurer.

The Jerome Multiple Listing Service was established in 1973 with seven realty firms as members. Now there are ten firms and about 43 persons in the organization.

Kimberly enrollment down

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — In spite of an expansion in housing in the Kimberly area, school enrollment has declined.

Superintendent Vernon Exner says the school district will be dropping two teacher positions this year because of the lower enrollment in the high school and a largely reduced sixth grade.

Last year, he said, the school had an all-time high of 60 students in the sixth grade.

This fall there will be about 35. One classroom of sixth graders had to be transferred to the junior high last year because of lack of space in the elementary school.

"This year there is adequate room in the junior high classes for the 60 students, he said.

Another 15 students disappeared from high school during the past year, he said. They either moved from the community or dropped out for other reasons, Exner explained.

In organizing the classes for the coming year Exner found two teacher positions could be eliminated, one in the high school and one in the elementary school.

The 1977-78 budget, adopted this week is up only 4.7 per cent. Teacher salaries were increased 8 per cent, however, by dividing the two full salaries that will be eliminated among remaining teachers. There were no protests Monday night to the $775,680 budget for the coming year.

Exner is unable to explain the decline in school enrollment other than indications are that most of the new families moving into Kimberly are young and have pre-school or first-, second- and third-grade children. There are higher enrollments showing up in the first three grades, he said.

Sleepy driver

"I WENT To sleep at the wheel," explained Harry Gibson, 34, Twin Falls, who this morning crashed a pickup into the corner of Max's Place, 178 Elm-Lake Blvd. Gibson, who suffered cuts and bruises on his chest in the accident, said he was coming into town from Volco, Inc., 1380 Highland Ave. E., to pick up some cream. He said he'd been up into the night before. Hospital officials listed him in fair condition. Citations are pending.

EPA denies request

TWIN FALLS — Environmental Protection Agency officials have denied a request by city officials for more time to correct excessive discharges of pollutants into the Snake River at the Twin Falls Waste Water Treatment Plant.

"After consideration of the problems the city has experienced in operating its sewage treatment plant, EPA has determined there is no justification for the continued non-compliance with federal law," Lloyd A. Reed, EPA enforcement division director, says in a letter to City Manager Jean Miller.

Reed cites continued "non-compliance" with federal discharge maximums since May, 1976.

The city had requested the EPA extend a final deadline of May 15 this year for full compliance until Aug. 1, saying the pollutant standards were too strict, and numerous problems with machinery at the plant had occurred.

EPA has threatened to sue the city $10,000 per day for each violation of its standards.

A decision on such a suit is expected in about a month.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened slightly lower Friday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average was off 0.16 point to 929.89, shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 278 to 253, among the 911 issues crossing the tape.

As the market opened, Citibank of New York announced it was keeping its prime rate unchanged at 6 1/2 percent level. Earlier this week Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. announced a quarter point cut in its rate to 6 1/2 percent, an action that gave the market a boost.

Also at the market opening the Commerce Department said that personal income rose 0.6 percent in May. It followed a rise of 0.8 percent in April.

Investors were encouraged by government reports of a 2 percent rise in May housing starts, a 3 percent hike in building permits and a 1.1 percent industrial production increase. Housing starts are 34 percent ahead of last year and production is 63 percent ahead.

Also in the news background, the Commerce Department reported business inventories rose 1 percent in April from March. But the report said sales declined 0.4 percent.

Late Thursday, the Federal Reserve Board reported the nation's money supply rose $1 billion in the latest reporting week and loan demand at New York banks climbed $340 million.

Final hole to decide U.S. open champion

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—Let them talk: let them want about Southern Hills' tough first three holes. Forget about them, and about No. 12, also, which Ben Hogan once called America's best par-4.

The hole where the U.S. Open will be won is the killer 18th, 449 yards of sheer terror that could be the most backbreaking finishing hole in the history of this ancient championship.

The tournament program advertises it as the "most difficult par-4" on the course, and that was never more true than it was Thursday. Seventeen golfers shot 1-under-par 69 or even-par 70 in the first round of the 77th Open, but 11 of them couldn't handle the par-4 18th.

When all the bogeys and double bogeys were counted, seven players—an Open record—shared the first round lead at 1-under-par 69 including Terry Diethel, one of only five men in the field of 153 who managed to make a birdie at 18.

"He must have hit a bad shot and got lucky," joked Hubert Green, who was able to laugh because he escaped from 18 with a par for 69 of his own. Tied with Diethel and Green were Rod Funseth, Larry Nelson, Grier Jones, Tom Purtzer and Florentino Molina. Funseth, Nelson and Jones all bogeyed 18.

Johnny Miller (71) said, "It's an unbelievable hole," and Tom Weiskopf (also 71) after playing the first three holes in five over) said, "It is unforgiving," but defending champion Jerry Pate perhaps best expressed in simple terms what happens there.

"It gets you," Pate said. "It got me." What it got him was a double bogey. He flew a bunker shot over the green and wound up with a 72.

He had plenty of company. Bob E. Smith and Steve Melnyk both went to the final tee needing par to take the lead. They both made double bogeys, 100, and joined a group of 10 at 70 that was headed by Arnold Palmer, who bogeyed 18. The other 70 shooters were Don Padgett, Sam Adams, Mike Morley, Joe Imman and Al Geiberger, all of whom finished with bogeys. George Burns, who, remarkably, birdied the last three holes, and Morris Hatalsky, who finished with a par.

Southern Hills' 18th may not be as famous as the closing holes at, say, Pebble Beach, Merion or Winged Foot, but it does have a history of its own. In 1958, when the Open last was played here, winner Tommy Bolt played only one round under par, a third-round 69. He finished it off with—you guessed—a double bogey at 18.

Since then, merely to make it a little more difficult, a swath was cut through a cluster of trees behind the tee and a new tee was built, adding 15 yards to the hole. The drive must be about 250 yards to reach a plateau on the left side of the fairway, and from there it's all uphill to an elevated green "protected" by bunkers. Thursday the hole played into a mild wind, and the pin was set at the back of the green.

"It's too long for the conditions we're playing," said Jack Nicklaus, who shot 74 and said he made "mistakes in bunches."

"I hit as good a drive as I could hit, and I had a 1-iron to the green," Nicklaus said.

Green said the hole plays closer to 470 than 449 and added "I'd like to see the guy who measured it."

"It's not playing a par-4," Palmer said. "It's not unfair, but it's awfully tough. It's the closest you can get to a par-5."

There were twice as many bogeys and double bogeys at 18 as there were pars.

Diethel made his birdie by crunching a 4-wood from 285 yards to 318 feet above the hole and making the putt. Besides Burns, the only other birdies at 18 were recorded by John Lister, who shot 72, Gary Jacobson, who had 73, and 76 shooter Jimmy Wright.

Green, who lost his chance for the solo lead by three putting 17 from 45 feet, made a 4-foot par at 18 for par. Funseth missed the green with a 3-wood, Nelson drove it in the rough and had to pitch an 8-iron back to the fairway, and Jones missed the green with a 3-wood. Purtzer made par at 18 only by sinking a 15-foot putt.

Grid power still expects reorganization

ATLANTA (UPI)—The president of the NCAA said Thursday that it's just a question of time before the national athletic group works out a reorganization plan that will help solve many of the problems now facing the major college football powers.

"We'll solve this problem," said University of Texas professor J. Neils Thompson, who took over leadership of the NCAA last January. "I'm sorry it didn't work out (at the last NCAA meeting) in Miami. We're now working on a better plan to present at our next annual meeting (next January in Atlanta)."

"We tried to go too fast at Miami," Thompson attended the twoday organizational meeting of the College Football Association (CFA) which wound up Thursday. He was present not as head of the NCAA but as faculty chairman of CFA member Texas.

"I came here in a peculiar situation," said Thompson. "But I fully believe that the CFA can function as a viable adjunct to the NCAA. This group provides an interchange of ideas among the major football schools which we did not have before."

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno said there was a general feeling among CFA members that "whatever we do, we can do within the NCAA. Moderation is the theme. We realize we're not going to get everything we feel is necessary."

"What we really want," said Paterno, "is to eliminate unfair advantages. We want to make football honest."

Seaver leaves Mets sadly, Kingman in huff

Tom Seaver was emotionally spent Thursday that it's just a question of time before the national athletic group works out a reorganization plan that will help solve many of the problems now facing the major college football powers.

"We'll solve this problem," said University of Texas professor J. Neils Thompson, who took over leadership of the NCAA last January. "I'm sorry it didn't work out (at the last NCAA meeting) in Miami. We're now working on a better plan to present at our next annual meeting (next January in Atlanta)."

"We tried to go too fast at Miami," Thompson attended the twoday organizational meeting of the College Football Association (CFA) which wound up Thursday. He was present not as head of the NCAA but as faculty chairman of CFA member Texas.

"I came here in a peculiar situation," said Thompson. "But I fully believe that the CFA can function as a viable adjunct to the NCAA. This group provides an interchange of ideas among the major football schools which we did not have before."

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno said there was a general feeling among CFA members that "whatever we do, we can do within the NCAA. Moderation is the theme. We realize we're not going to get everything we feel is necessary."

"What we really want," said Paterno, "is to eliminate unfair advantages. We want to make football honest."

Seaver begged listeners at Shea to bear with him as he tried to detail his feelings.

"Ah-hin, if I could retain enough composure to wait six seconds, I'd have it made," Seaver said chuckling. "The ovation the fans gave me the other night after passing Sandy Koufax in career strikeouts will be one of the most memorable and warmest memories of my life."

Both the Reds and Mets continued unloading stars. New York peddled troublesome slugger Dave Kingman, who hit 37 homers for the Mets last season but was battling only .209 with nine circuit smashes this year, to San Diego for infielder Bobby Valentine and southpaw Paul Siebert, and then dealt shortstop Mike Phillips to St. Louis for outfielder Joel Youngblood.

Unlike Seaver, Kingman was in a surly mood when he went to Shea Thursday to pack his belongings. He threatened a group of photographers that he would break their cameras if he heard a click.

Cincinnati traded pitcher Gary Nolan to California, sent relief ace Raulo Easki to Cleveland and dispatched reliever Mike Caldwell to Milwaukee. Most of the Reds' returns were in minor league talent.

Eastwick, a vital cog in Cincinnati's World

Series victory over the Boston Red Sox in 1975, had balked at going to New York in the Seaver deal. Nelan was a hotshot hurler with the Reds when he broke in as an 18-year-old starter in 1967 and was a key pitcher for the Reds.

Pitcher Ken Brett had "mixed emotions" over his trade by the Chicago White Sox to California for infielder John Flannery and pitchers Don Kirkwood and John Verhoeven.

"I don't like being traded at 3 a.m.," said the lefty Brit, who worked without a contract for the White Sox this season. "But my entire family is in the Los Angeles area and I have a ton of friends out there."

St. Louis Cardinals' General Manager Bing Devine acknowledged he would be criticized for trading .300 hitting outfielder Bake McBride, but felt the acquisition of left-hander Tommy Underwood from Philadelphia was justified.

The Cards may use Underwood as a starter since they now have a relief corps of Eastwick, Al Hrabosky, Butch Metzger and Clay Carroll. Philadelphia continued active in the trade mart with a battery change involving Montreal.

The Phils sent right-hander Wayne Twitchell and catcher Tim Lincecum to the Expos for southpaw Dan Werthamer and reliever Barry Foote.

Pitcher Dock Ellis continued his migration to the majors, trading an American League uniform for the second time since last season as he travelled from the New York Yankees to the Oakland A's to the Texas Rangers. Texas also traded pitcher Steve Hargan to Atlanta.

"I know that Ellis has always been a starter and I suspect it will remain that way," said a Texas spokesman. This will mean the departure to the bullpen for either Mike Marshall or Nelson Briles.

Catcher-first baseman Cliff Johnson and outfielder Willie Crawford, traded to American League clubs by Houston, said they were pleased at the opportunity to serve as designated hitters with their new teams.

Jolson went to the New York Yankees and Crawford to Oakland.

"I think I have more value in the American League," said Crawford. "Houston treated me fairly, but I expected a trade."

Johnson, constantly bickering with Houston Manager Bill Virdon over his lack of starting assignments, said: "I just want to play and be happy. All I've ever asked is a chance to go to the plate four or five times every game."

In another deal, Pittsburgh traded utility outfielder Ed Kirkpatrick to Texas for reserve infielder Jim Fregosi, who never lived up to his potential after the Mets once acquired him in a deal with California for freeballer Nolan Ryan.

Tears behind, Seaver eager to join Reds

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

As best he could, Tom Seaver pushed the past all behind him today and left the country—not to run away, but to join his new ballclub, the world champion Cincinnati Reds, in Montreal.

No longer depressed or as emotionally overwrought as he was Thursday morning at Shea Stadium where he broke down struggling to put into words his feelings over leaving the New York Mets, Seaver seemed almost reborn with a fresh supply of optimism and enthusiasm.

He even managed a smile over a remark made to him by his six-year-old daughter, Sara. "Look at all the new friends we're gonna meet," she said to her father before he left their home in Greenwich, Conn.

The 32-year-old right-hander took the same view.

"I'm going to join the best team in baseball," said Seaver, who had been with the Mets since 1967 and was easily their outstanding player for most of that time. "I feel everything happens for the best. The worst is behind me. From now on, it'll only get better."

It was a trying time Thursday for Seaver when he sat for what probably was the last time in the same chair he had for so many years before, whenever answering newsmen's questions in the Mets' clubhouse at Shea Stadium. Traumatic as Thursday's relatively brief news conference was for Seaver, it wasn't nearly as emotional an experience for him as saying goodbye to his teammates Wednesday night in Atlanta before the ballgame with the Braves was over.

Shortstop Buddy Harrelson, like a kid brother to Seaver, hugged him and wasn't ashamed to tell him he loved him. Seaver told Harrelson he felt the same way about him and when the Mets' pitching ace tried to say farewell to pitcher Jerry Koosman, neither could find the proper words.

Any good baseball man will tell you the worst possible thing he can do is make a trade in anger and that's precisely what happened in the 11th hour deal before the trading deadline. Craig Horner, who was traded to the Reds for pitcher Pat Zachry, infielder Doug Flynn and outfielders Steve Henderson and Don Norman.

The Mets followed up that one by sending big Dave Kingman to San Diego for infielder Bobby Valentine and pitcher Paul Siebert, and in this case, too, resentment played an important part. Before dealing Kingman, General Manager Joe McDonald renewed the Mets' offer to him, calling for $200,000 a year. Kingman, playing for $72,000 now, said no again, and that did it. He was gone.

It wasn't any major force that implemented the deal but rather a straw that did it, the final straw as far as Seaver was concerned.

It was a paragraph in a column written by Dick Young, Sports Editor and Columnist for the New York Daily News, saying Seaver was making more money than him. Young also alluded to Ryan's wife, Ruth, being friendly with Seaver's wife, Nancy. Seaver "long has treated Nolan Ryan like a little brother" and now little brother was making more than big brother.

Ryan is a former teammate of Seaver's and they are still close friends. So are their wives.

Seaver, who didn't really want to leave the Mets, had come up with some suggestions how he could stay and had passed them along to McDonald Tuesday night. McDonald, in turn, had relayed them to the Mets owners and directors and they were considering the suggestions favorably.

But when Seaver read Young's reference to him and Ryan, and to his wife and Ryan's wife in Atlanta Wednesday morning, he became incensed, particularly since he felt Young always sided against him in his salary differences with the Mets. Seaver called Arthur Richman, the Mets public relations director, and said, "That's the end! Tell them to forget whatever we talked about last night. I wanna get the hell out of here."

After he had cooled off, Seaver told me that nothing that was ever written could destroy his friendship with Ryan or the warm family feeling existing between his wife and Ryan's.

"I like Nolan," said Seaver. "When my family is brought into it, I think that's hitting below the belt."

So now Seaver is gone from the Mets and it could be a brand new race in the National League West because the Reds have themselves the best pitcher in baseball.

Everybody seems to think the Mets got nothing in return for Seaver. That isn't quite true. Zachry has been struggling lately but was co-Rookie of the Year last season. He's only 25 and could come back. Flynn is the best defensive second baseman in the National League, and Henderson and Norman both are outstanding young prospects.

Wouldn't it be ironic if the Mets beat out the Reds for the NL pennant on the strength of a trade made in a moment of anger? It doesn't figure to happen, but stranger things have in baseball.

TROUBLESOME slugger Dave Kingman, hitting just .209 with nine homers, is in a surly mood as he leaves Shea Stadium Thursday after cleaning out his locker. Kingman, who was traded to San Diego for two players, threatened a group of photographers he would break their cameras if he heard a click as he left. (UPI)

Hamblin said the scotchball format will be used throughout the tournament and most of the merchandise prizes will be awarded in the net division.

Tom Ratchford and Kevin Packard will be seeking their fourth consecutive gross championship Sunday.

Finley loses new assault on Kuhn

NEW YORK (UPI) — Charlie Finley verbally blasted his arch-enemy, Bowie Kuhn, again Thursday night, accusing the baseball commissioner of favoritism and misuse of his power in allowing the trade of pitcher Tom Seaver from the New York Mets to the world champion Cincinnati Reds.

Finley, the owner of the Oakland A's, said Kuhn should have disallowed the Seaver trade especially after he had used his power to veto the sale of A's pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees last June.

That time Kuhn said it was not in the best interests of baseball to allow Blue to go to the Yankees.

Finley questions whether it is in baseball's best interest to allow a three-time Cy Young Award winner to go to a two-time defending world champion.

"The trade of Tom Seaver to Cincinnati wasn't a whimper from Bowie Kuhn confirms his perverted, select, and political use of his office to favor his friends and punish anyone he dislikes," Finley said in a prepared statement which he read to UPI over the phone from his Chicago office.

"The similarities between the Seaver deal and my assignment of Vida Blue to the New York Yankees are striking. Both deals were made on June 15, the trading deadline. Both involved Cy Young Award winning pitchers.

Lake Placid calls for Olympic funds

PRAGUE (UPI) — Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the 1980 Winter Olympics, needs money to carry on the organizational work which is now well underway, the International Olympic Committee was told Thursday.

With the problem of environment now settled, Lake Placid wants to push on with the construction of venues and accommodations. But to do this it needs the loans and grants offered by the IOC.

J. Bernard Fell, Lake Placid's executive director, said in his report to the IOC: "These 'loans and grants' should and must be made as soon as possible. Our committee has built these funds in the early stages of Games management and inordinate delays will force our financial management 'department' to enter a financing arrangement that would increase our budgeting allowance for administrative operations."

Fell would not reveal, at a press conference, how much money was involved.

Lake Placid reiterated its theme of getting the Games in perspective by cutting press accreditation to 1,700. There were over 3,000 journalists at Innsbruck and Sapporo. Neither has Lake Placid any plans yet to accommodate the world's press.

Dodgers nip Bucs in 11th

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Bill Russell, whose ninth-inning error had allowed Pittsburgh to tie the score, doubled in the 11th inning and scored the winning run on Dusty Baker's sacrifice fly Thursday night to give the Los Angeles Dodgers a 3-2 victory over the Pirates.

Error compounds drought

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The President of U and I, Inc., says the western drought will hit the sugar industry hard, but it will be compounded by a Bureau of Reclamation mistake.

David L. Cannon said the sugar beet processing firm faces a 20 per cent cutback in beet acreage contracted with farmers this year. He said the 1976 acreage was 125,000, but that it will drop to 100,500 acres this year. Cannon said after the Bureau of Reclamation predicted drastic cuts in available irrigation water for Washington's Yakima Irrigation District, 41 and 1 growers in the Yakima Valley reduced their sugar beet planting to 1,800 acres—down from 18,000 acres last year. "However, in mid May the bureau announced that water supplies had been miscalculated and would actually be about 100 per cent higher than the original projections for the Yakima Irrigation District. "It was a very costly mistake," Cannon said. The Bureau of Reclamation correction came too late to make any significant crop planting adjustments. At the firm's annual stockholders' meeting, Wednesday Cannon also reported earnings for the year fell to $5.5 million from $10.7 million last year.

Cannon said the drop in annual earnings resulted from lower sugar prices and a slowdown in the price of beets. "The beginning of the fiscal year," he said.

Lemhi dairies seek feed price ceiling

SALMON, Idaho (UPI)—An appeal has been made by the dairy industry in Lemhi County to Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland and Congress for assistance to stay in business. Don C. Gray, Lemhi County drought coordinator, said today area producers and the local cheese factory have asked for help in the form of a subsidy or ceiling on the price of dairy feed.

Bergland was advised that concern was expressed at a meeting of the 17 local milk producers and manager of the cheese factory over the continued rise in the price of hay and feed grain. Gray said the producers said they could "break even" at $65 per ton for hay and $80 per ton for feed grain "but would be forced to cut back on their herds if prices of purchased feed rose above those figures."

"Most producers would be forced to cut production materially if prices continue to rise, or as an alternative, they must have government help in order not to be forced into bankruptcy," he said.

Gray noted the dairy industry in Lemhi County has enjoyed a phenomenal increase during the past three years, from about $40,000 in 1974 to just over $200,000 the past year.

South Hills thunderstorms return

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley-Rupert area: Mostly fair tonight through Saturday but with a chance of a few thunderstorms mainly near the South Hills. High temperatures Saturday near 85 and overnight lows 50 to 55. Sunday's outlook: continued warm with continued chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Spraying and dusting winds are expected to be light to variable during the early morning and late evening hours becoming 8 to 12 miles per hour during the afternoon hours.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley: Mostly fair and continued warm through Saturday. Chance of afternoon rain and thunderstorms. High temperatures Saturday 80 to 85 and overnight lows tonight near 40. Sunday's outlook: continued warm with chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Synopses: A weak low pressure area in northern Nevada will be spreading moist unstable air into southern Idaho. This will increase the chances for thunderstorm activity along the South Hills today and again Saturday. Although some thunderstorm activity is expected to spread into the Magic Valley over the weekend, rainfall amounts if any will be quite light in agricultural valleys. This along with continued warm temperatures will cause fairly high demand by most crops on existing soil moisture. The extended outlook for Sunday through Tuesday calls for continued warm with chance of an afternoon or evening thunderstorm mainly near the mountains. High temperatures generally in the 80s and overnight lows near 50.

Orange grower proposes leasing trees, produce

ORANGE COVE, Calif. (UPI) — If your thumb isn't green or you don't have the time, patience or space to grow your own fruit, you can lease your very own orange tree. Citrus grower Jacques Giddens, who farms 40 acres of citrus groves near the Central California community, will lease you one of his trees for $12 a year. The tree will produce approximately 160 pounds of oranges, enough to keep the average family in good supply for most of the year. Actually, depending on where you live, it will cost you somewhat more than $12 a year, because Giddens insists that you pay freight costs to have the oranges shipped to you via truck. "For the $12 a year plus shipping costs I will farm each tree, pick the crop and ship it to the lessee," he said. "It will be like having your own one-tree farm with a hired hand to take care of it." Even with shipping costs, Giddens says his deal is a bargain. "Shipping charges on 160 pounds of oranges would be about $45 to New York; $39 to Chicago, and $15 to Los Angeles," Giddens said. This would mean a per pound cost of about 28 cents in New York, 31 cents in Chicago and 16 cents in Los Angeles. Giddens has an ulterior motive for his lease-a-tree scheme — he is doing his best to lead the federal government's marketing order pro-rate system that limits orange growers to selling only two-thirds of their fresh fruit

'Disappearance' perplexes mart analysts

By GARY LARK
Commodity News Service
CHICAGO (UPI) — Cattle market analysts were perplexed by the large number of cattle reported under "disappearance" category of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cattle on Feed report.

The monthly government report, released Wednesday, showed "other disappearance" of cattle during May at 253,000 head in the seven major producing states. This was an increase of 153 per cent over last year.

The category includes cattle which were shipped to other feedlots for further feeding, returned to pasture or died. The report does not specify exactly what happened to these cattle or why there was such an increase over last year's level. Trade analysts were at a loss for a precise explanation, but some possibilities were suggested.

Drought conditions in the Dakotas last winter prompted movement of cattle south and is reflected in the "other disappearance" for May, according to Price. Lightweight cattle were placed in feedlots on a holding ration of hay and silage to await the incoming green pasture, according to Fred Heckman of the Commodity Research and Development Company.

As a result the April placements were "overstated by at least 135,000 head," Heckman said. Improved pasture conditions and deteriorating cattle prices in May could have changed the minds of some cattle feeders who put lightweight cattle back on pasture, according to Tim Bennett, analyst for the CattleFax division of the American National Cattlemen's Association.

Bennett said it was unlikely that heavier weight cattle already on "hot rations" would be taken off feed due to resultant shrink. Weakening cattle prices and protein costs may have encouraged movement back to pasture, according to Doug Murfield of the Statistical Reporting Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Murfield said the price factor and the improvement of pasture appeared to be the major concerns. Murfield pointed out that the largest increase in "other disappearance" took place in Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa where there is a greater number of farmer-feeders as opposed to commercial feedlots located predominantly in the South-west.

Ron Radenz of the Nebraska Office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture confirmed Murfield's contention. He said a combination of favorable rains and less favorable prices encouraged movement back to pasture of cattle that were initially intended for slaughter.

But Gaston of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Kansas office and Ray Halley of the USDA Iowa office generally agreed and said this sort of movement is normally common to smaller feedlots who have more flexibility along these lines.

land closes

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — About 16,000 acres of public lands in northern Humboldt County will be closed to vehicles effective July 7 as a prelude to studies which could lead to a wilderness area designation. The area includes Blue Lake, an ice age remnant lying 8,000 feet atop the Pine Forest range 20 miles south of Reno.

Chet Conrad, Winnemucca district manager for the Bureau of Land Management, said the isolated and essentially undeveloped character of the lake and its surroundings have made the area a popular retreat for outdoor recreationalists. Conrad said his decision to close the area to vehicles was prompted by requests from groups who use the area for recreation and desire a "wilderness experience." The BLM recognized the land for its wilderness characteristics during development of the land use plan for the Winnemucca District in 1972, he said.

Report made

KING, Ill. — George Larson, chairman of the board of the King Hill Irrigation District directors, has reported on the chemical weed and grass killer used in the canals. He said it turns the weeds and grasses into a gelatinous substance; then the pressure of the water pumps forces it to break up and flow through without plugging up the flow of the water.
